Remember, recognize our veterans on their day

By Gen. John Jumper
Air Combat Command commander

LANGLEY AIR FORCE BASE, Va. (ACCNS) — This Veterans Day, Americans enjoy the fruits of peace, freedom and prosperity in a world where too many must struggle to live their lives free from conflict, violence and repression.

John Kennedy once said, "A nation reveals itself not only by the individuals it produces, but by those it honors, those it remembers."

Today, too few Americans pause to remember and thank our veterans — the men and women, their sons and daughters, who bear our national memory and serve as the quiet heroes of freedom. Veterans know better than any other Americans that the ideals of democracy and freedom will always be linked to the selfless service of our armed forces. Throughout our nation's history, the price of democracy has been their selfless service.

As leaders in the fight for liberty, we have sought to advance the cause of freedom and democracy to people all over the world. The credit for our own freedom, as well as our continued security, belongs overwhelmingly to the men and women who have served in our nation's armed forces — our veterans. Had they not been there yesterday, were they not with us today, our world would be far different.

On Veteran's Day we salute their service, honor their sacrifice and thank them for supporting this nation in every hour of need.

And we acknowledge that freedom's cost continues long after the guns fall silent. Many of our veterans bear the disabilities and scars of military service. The families of others — who never returned from their service — live always with a profound sense of loss. It is our duty to remember what our veterans have done and to uphold our commitments to them and their families.

As we mark the past achievements of our veterans, let us remember that they are a vital part of our past, present and future. They are not distant historical footnotes, but as close as a father or mother, brother or sister, grandfather or grandmother, friend or neighbor. They represent what is best in the American spirit.

Let us pledge this Veterans Day that we will honor those who served before us by continuing to build the greatest aerospace force of the 21st century.

Honor those who bravely served

Col. Del Eulberg
99th Air Base Wing commander

As we honor those who have bravely served our nation this Veterans Day, please take a moment to reflect on their sacrifices to preserve America's freedom.

Men and women throughout our history have made the ultimate sacrifice to uphold the belief that people and personal liberty are what make our nation the greatest in the world. Accordingly, our fighting forces continue to protect and defend our nation's interests worldwide.

As members of today's Air Force team and family, you are making the essential contributions to protect our democracy for future generations. Let us take time to proudly commemorate those who have served our nation and those who continue to serve.

Pause to salute armed forces members

Gen. Henry Shelton
Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff

Saturday marks the first Veterans Day of the 21st century. As we have done since 1919, Americans pause to salute the brave men and women who have served in the Armed Forces of the United States.

This day was originally set aside as a day of observance for those who fought and died in the "Great War," World War I — the "war to end all wars." Obviously, World War I was not the end of warfare; in fact, it was the precursor of warfare throughout the 20th century. So with history as our guide, members of our Armed Forces undoubtedly will be called upon to go into harm's way in the new century. Our men and women in uniform, serving around the globe today, stand ready to answer that call.

In 1954, Veterans Day became a tribute to all those who have served America in all wars. It is fitting to note that this change came on the heels of another important conflict, the Korean War. During this commemoration of the 50th anniversary of the Korean War, we should pay honor to our veterans of that conflict. Their great sacrifice embodies the spirit of selflessness in the face of overwhelming deprivation and hardship.

This Veterans Day, I challenge every American to consider the sacrifice of those who lost their lives in our Nation's struggles to preserve liberty and freedom. Whether attending a parade, a memorial service or observing the day in private, pause at the 11th hour to reflect upon and mark this occasion.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff and I join you in paying homage to our veterans for all they have done. Their actions made a difference for America and the world. Their dedication to duty has preserved our precious legacy of freedom and liberty in this great Republic.

Local traffic study affects team Nellis

By Mr. John Monroe
AWFC Public Affairs

The Nevada Department of Transportation, in cooperation with local government agencies and Nellis, is conducting a special traffic study to identify current and potential long-term traffic problems in northeast Las Vegas.

The study area is bordered by Bonanza on the south, Martin Luther King Boulevard on the west, Hollywood Boulevard on the east and Apex on the north.

"Team Nellis factors weigh heavily in this study as the majority of the base spends an increasing share of their day on the study area roads during their commute," said Col. Bob Lynn, 99th Air Base Wing vice commander. "Ask anyone taking the daily commute along Craig Road or from Indian Springs and you can get a pulse on existing traffic congestion."

The study is conducted in two phases. During the first phase of the study, the purpose and need for the project is established, improvement alternatives identified, a public participation program initiated and an Early Action Plan is prepared.

Six different locations along Craig Road have already been identified as significant problem areas and will be addressed for recommended solutions under the first phase.

"We are taking a look at traffic patterns and current traffic conditions in the Northeast section to help project future growth and transportation needs to the year 2025," said Ms. Cathy Razor, Nevada Department of Transportation. "Nellis is the major employer in the study area, so we are definitely concerned with the base motorist trends."

During the second phase of the study, a detailed evaluation of traffic alternatives is conducted, different strategies for lessening the congested areas are compared and an implementation plan developed.

The study is expected to take approximately one year to complete, with each phase scheduled for six months.

Nellis is represented at the traffic study meetings and base people are invited to provide inputs regarding current and possible future problems. Provide inputs by e-mail to Mr. Joe Hart, the Nellis community planner, at traffic@nellis.af.mil, or leave a brief message describing traffic concerns at the Public Affairs response line, 652-4038. Provide inputs no later than Dec 1.

"Community leaders are anxious to identify and resolve problem areas," said Col. Lynn. "Nellis has a voice at the table, and I encourage all base personnel to voice their concerns and opinions."

U.S. 95 projects

Work to accomplish the widening of U.S. 95 between Martin Luther King Boulevard and Craig Road was divided into seven projects, several of which have phases:

Project 1 - U.S. 95 widening from north of Rainbow Boulevard interchange to Craig road, one additional lane in each direction. Phase A extends from Rainbow Boulevard Interchange to Cheyenne Avenue. Phase B extends from Cheyenne Avenue to Craig Road.

Project 2 - Bridge structure replacements over U.S. 95 at Torrey Pines Drive, Decatur Boulevard and Valley View Boulevard to accommodate the freeway widening. Work on Harmony Avenue is also included.

Project 3 - U.S. 95 widening from Martin Luther King Boulevard to just east of Valley View Boulevard, two additional lanes in each direction.

Project 4 - U.S. 95 widening from just east of Valley View Boulevard to approximately Jones Boulevard, two additional lanes in each direction.

Project 5 - U.S. 95 widening from approximately Jones Boulevard to Washington Avenue. Phase A includes the Rainbow Boulevard interchange. Phase B is the actual widening of two additional lanes in each direction from Jones Boulevard to the Rainbow curve, and one lane in each direction from the Rainbow curve north.

Clinton signs authorization act; boosts pay, TriCare

by Jim Garamone
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON (AFPN) — A 3.7 percent military pay raise, TriCare changes, military modernization and lifetime medical benefits are just some of the aspects of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 that President Bill Clinton signed into law Oct. 30.

The act gives the Department of Defense permission to spend an authorized overall budget of $309.9 billion. The fiscal 2001 appropriations act signed in August actually provided the money.

The authorization act set total military fiscal 2001 end strength at 1,382,242. The Air Force's end strength is 357,000; the Army's, 480,000; the Navy's, 372,642; and the Marines', 172,600.

End strength is down 3,190 from fiscal 2000 for the active force and up by 4,366 for the Selected Reserve.

In addition to the 3.7 percent across-the-board pay raise that goes into effect Jan. 1, service members in pay grades E-5 to E-7 receive a targeted, one-time monthly raise of $32 to $59 starting July 1.

Congress has added funds to the basic allowance for housing to reduce out-of-pocket expenses service members must pay if they live off base.

of-pocket expenses by fiscal 2005.

The act extends the military housing privatization program. The program allows commercial firms to build and run military family housing areas.

Another pay action calls for active and reserve military person-

TriCare military medical system in several ways. For active-duty personnel, TriCare Prime Remote now covers family members as well as active-duty personnel. The act also eliminates co-payments for active-duty family members enrolled in TriCare Prime. It also allows travel reimbursements to those who must go more than 100 miles to see a TriCare health-care provider.

The biggest TriCare change, however, covers Medicare-eligible retirees. The act restructures TriCare to allow Medicare-eligible military retirees and their family members to continue their coverage beginning in fiscal 2002.

Under the plan, Medicare-eligible beneficiaries would pay no co-pays, deductibles or TriCare enrollment fees or premiums. Retirees can receive care under Medicare; also, any medical expense not covered by Medicare will be paid by TriCare.

The act also expands the mail-order pharmacy service to cover all beneficiaries, including Medicare-eligible retirees.

The act authorizes the following procurements totaling $63.2 billion:

- 16 MV-22 Osprey tilt-rotor aircraft
- 12 C-17 strategic airlifters
- 10 F-22 Raptor stealth aircraft
- 16 regular and two air ambulances
- $244.2 million for Joint Direct Attack Munitions
- $109.2 million for Global Hawk unmanned aerial vehicles
- $149.8 million for two F-15E Eagle all-weather air-to-surface aircraft
- $274 million for research & development of a new aircraft carrier
- $540 million for research & development of the new Zumwalt-class destroyers
- $109.7 billion in operations and maintenance funds

Currently, service members living off base pay an average of 19 percent of their housing costs out-of-pocket. The money will bring that average to 15 percent in fiscal 2001. The legislation authorizes the defense secretary to raise BAH rates to eliminate out-nel to be able to use the Thrift Savings Plan. The plan would allow military personnel to invest a percentage of their pre-tax pay toward retirement. Taxes on participants' investments and earnings are deferred while in the plan.

Radiology Week kicks off

By Staff Sgt. John Bustamante
99th Medical Group

The staff at Mike O'Callaghan Federal Hospital's Diagnostic Imaging Department is celebrating National Radiology Week which started Monday and continues through Sunday.

The imaging team would like the community to join in the celebration by stopping by for a look inside. An imaging exhibit is on display to show examples of different procedures and accessories needed to perform the exams. The five radiologists and 33 technologists perform approximately 285 general and specialized examinations a day involving x-ray, ultrasound, computed tomography, MRI and nuclear medicine.

General diagnostic radiology handles all requests for regular x-rays from the outpatient clinics, wards and emergency room. Among the many special procedures accomplished at Nellis are arthograms (looking at a joint space), voiding cystourethrogram (viewing the urinary bladder) hysterosalpingogram (viewing the uterus and fallopian tubes) and barium enema (viewing the large intestine).

The department is also equipped with state of the art equipment including mammography imagers, Needle Localization Stereotactic equipment and a bone density DEXA machine used to check osteoporosis (bone density loss). An average of 360 mammograms are performed monthly by the clinic.

The CAT scan suite utilizes advanced technology that allows the radiology staff to perform numerous types of scans on internal organs.

The MRI suite has state of the art equipment that provides faster service to the patients. More than 2,600 MRI examinations were performed last year for Nellis community members.

Nellis is the only base in Air Combat Command with a nuclear medicine department. The most common test performed here includes brain scan, lung scan, bone scan and gallbladder imaging.

The Diagnostic Imaging Department encompasses a wide variety of special services. Together, technologists and radiologists work closely to achieve the best possible care for the patients at Nellis. For more information about National Radiology Week, call the hospital at 653-2830.

Throughout history, Aggressors train the force

By Lt. Col. William Horn
414th Combat Training Squadron

Born in 1972 as a response to the poor aerial combat performance of the United States Air Force aircrew in Vietnam, four Aggressor squadrons were established by the Air Force with a charter to improve combat performance throughout the air forces through realistic, challenging dissimilar air combat training and threat academics. At the height of operations, the Air Force fielded the 64th and 65th Aggressor Squadrons at Nellis, the 26th Aggressor Squadron in the Pacific and the 527th Aggressor Squadron in Europe dedicated all of their sorties to adversary, or "red air" support.

These four squadrons performed this critical mission admirably for the next 17 years and ushered in a new era of Aggressor support when both the 64th and 65th flew as Red Air in the first Red Flag exercise in November 1975. The Aggressors continue to support to this day.

However, 1989 and 1990 were turbulent times in Aggressor history as the force was reduced from four squadrons of 18-24 aircraft, covering all theaters of operations, to a single division assigned to Nellis.

For all intents and purposes, the sole professional Air Force adversary force during the 1990's has been the Adversary Tactics Division of the 414th Combat Training Squadron, 57th Wing, here.

This year the division increased to seven aircraft and 12 permanently assigned pilots with 100 percent of its sorties dedicated to adversary support.

The concept behind the pared-down organization was, and remains to this day, its charter to remain true to the "Aggressors" our combat air force had known for the last 18 years, and continue the dedication to strict, professional threat replication.

From the Air Force senior leadership to 57th Wing leadership, the philosophy behind threat training was to continue, to the maximum extent possible, the programs and professional adversary support that had become the hallmark of the Aggressors.

They are professionally trained and equipped to replicate enemy weapons and tactics across a broad threat level spectrum, and, in short, provide realistic, demanding and safe training to the combat air force and our allies.

Though limited by their size and the number of sorties they can generate, today's Aggressors continue the traditions of providing professional adversaries and Red Force leadership for the combat air force and our allied participants during Red Flag and Maple Flag exercises.

In this 25th anniversary of Red Flag, the Aggressors find themselves more challenged and in more demand than ever, striving to integrate the space and information operations threat into a full spectrum adversary focused on preparing our Air Expeditionary Forces for the next generation of threats. All the while continually working with all divisions of the 414th CTS to ensure the safest environment possible within the most challenging and demanding air combat exercise in the world.
